

---

the mood i'm in i step on the D train it is about 1130 at night and the train is full. i can tell there has been a Yankee game that has just let out because orange seats are cloaked in blue jean laps with blue and white shirts to match. and i want to ask the guy across "did we win?" but this is the subway & people don't talk do they & i am too easily wrapped up in another conversation red not blue the words are stomping on the heat with heavy brooklyn accents of two women one is explaining the sweltering subway system this summer night. "the center of the earth is radiating heat, ya know, plus, there's electrical stuff, there's shit going on down here." and this woman has black hair she can't end sentences without an open mouth "not for nothin' but there is no excuse" she says when the conversation moves on. and my walkman batteries die with a groan so the conversation is harsh music to my ears and the woman she is standing feet shoulder-width apart she is heat and city in black jeans. "my father's still in his faggoty mood." mouth open she ends her sentence. so that's what i'm in.

Jenna Capeci