Translation of a poem by Chen Lin

The water is cold. The water will crack my horse's bones.
SEND BOTH BATTALIONS
UNDER YOUR COMMAND.
"We are men. Don't ship
us off to build that damn wall. We would rather die fighting,"
OFFICIAL WORK MUST NOT BE DELAYED. WE WORK TO BRING ORDER.

The border is many young men. The home is many widows. They open this letter:
"Marry again. Marry
now. Don't wait for
me. Remember: Show
respect for your new family.
And sometimes think of
your old husband out here."

After 2 months she wrote back. She asked me how I could say such things. How could I?

"How could I ask you to wait? If the baby is a girl let her live.
If a boy - let him die."
You alone cannot see: Under the long wall
dead men's bones support dead men's bones.

M.B. Duggan
Winnipeg